

PERSONAL AND PROFESSIONAL ASSESSMENT

Conscious career decisions

Do you sometimes have the feeling that your career is determined by coincidences and apparent inevitabilities? In the personal and professional assessment, you will identify your professional goals and needs so that you can make your career decisions consciously in the future.

Your professional career probably spans more than 40 years. In the rapid economic change, you will not only change your jobs and employers several times, but perhaps even your profession. It is therefore becoming increasingly important to align your professional development correctly at an early stage as part of strategic career planning and to adapt it to your ideas again and again in the course of your professional life. Personal and professional assessment is thus a career long topic.

Personal and professional assessment for job search and application

The result of the personal and professional assessment is a description of your requirements for a job and a working environment. This prepares you optimally for negotiations with your employer about your professional development as well as for the external job search and application. You know what you want to achieve professionally, know your needs and present your skills and strengths in a credible way. Personal and professional assessment is a prerequisite for effective self-marketing (personal branding) for internal positioning as well as in the application process. Read more about personal and professional assessment under the following link:

Offer personal and professional assessment \(PDF\)

Your next step

So that you can get to know me and my approach, arrange a free and non-binding 30-minute preliminary meeting (by phone or online) by calling 076 223 97 88 or by e-mail, WhatsApp or Threema.

I also offer personal and professional assessment via MS Teams.